Correctional Internal Affairs Investigators
Job Analysis

PREA
PRISON RAPE ELIMINATION ACT

NIC/ The Moss Group, Inc. Cooperative Agreement #05S18GJ0

August 2006
EXECUTIVE SUMMARY:
COMPARISON of a CORRECTIONAL INVESTIGATORS JOB PROFILE & PREA

The Correctional Security Network (CSN) was engaged by the Moss Group, Inc (MG) under provisions of the National Institute of Corrections (NIC) Cooperative Agreement # 05S18GJ10 to develop a Job Profile of Sexual Assault investigator in Adult Correctional facilities operated by state agencies in the USA. With the assistance of staff from the Facilitation Center at Eastern Kentucky University and the Missouri Department of Corrections, a three day job analysis and training review was conducted using a facilitated storyboarding process.

The major components of the three day project included:

1. Development of a job profile for Kentucky Department of Corrections Internal Affairs Investigators.
2. A review of the Kentucky Department of Corrections Internal Affairs Investigators job profile by a national subject matter expert (SME) team of correctional sexual assault investigators familiar with the mandates of Prison Rape Elimination Act (PREA).
3. A review of a Moss Group Sexual Assault Investigator Training by a national Subject Matter Expert team of correctional sexual assault investigators familiar with the mandates of PREA.
4. Identification of tasks of new and veteran investigators that should be addressed in an investigator training program. Specific emphasis was placed on PREA related implications for each Training group.

KEY Findings
Component 1
Based on a comparison of a 1999 Missouri Department of Corrections job profile of correctional investigators with the current (2006) practice of Kentucky Department of Corrections (KYDOC) Internal Affairs Investigators there has been limited PREA related change in the Commonwealth. KYDOC Internal Affairs Investigators are tasked by their supervisors (wardens) with a wide range of responsibilities not directly related to their role as investigators.

Component 2
A national Subject Matter Expert team of correctional sexual assault investigators familiar with the mandates of PREA identified a significant number of policy and practice changes that would strengthen the sexual assault investigation process in correctional facilities.

Component 3
A national Subject Matter Expert team of correctional sexual assault investigators familiar with the mandates of PREA suggested a number of changes in the Moss Group Sexual Assault Investigator training.
This report was a collaborative effort by representatives of nine correctional agencies. While the findings cannot be scientifically generalized to all correctional systems, the virtual absence of change between the Investigator DACUM Job Analysis completed by the Missouri Department of Corrections in 1999, and the validation by Kentucky in 2006, suggests that the duties and tasks of correctional investigators have changed little over the past seven years. Further, during the review of the job profile for Investigators by the PREA SME no inaccuracies in the basic duties were identified. The SME did however identify PREA related training suggestions for the most significant of these tasks for new and veteran workers.

Introduction

The internal investigator position in correctional institutions evolved as a response to the increasing levels of prosecutable criminal activity within the facilities. The specific duties and tasks of investigators have proven to be consistent from system to system based on the initial Job Profile developed by the Missouri Department of Corrections (MODOC) in 1999, and validated by the Kentucky Department of Corrections (KYDOC) during a review and validation of the MODOC chart in 2006. The duties and tasks of investigators remain fundamentally the same across agencies. The role of correctional investigators has grown from temporary custodians of evidence to what now encompasses an increasingly more complex set of responsibilities. The Prison Rape Elimination Act (PREA) has proven to be a catalyst for the further expansion of the role of correctional investigators.

In 2003 the United States Congress passed the Prison Rape Elimination Act (PREA) thus creating new requirements for institutional investigators. Under the provisions of PREA, investigators must now demonstrate the skills necessary to not only investigate crimes and retain evidence, but also to interact with offenders who are victims of sexual assault whether at the hands of other inmates or agency staff.

In some facilities this position may also be known as the “Internal Affairs Officer” or the “Intelligence Officer” denoting their responsibilities to investigate staff misconduct or the tracking of gangs and Security Threat Group members.

Overview of the DACUM Job Analysis

Although there are a variety of techniques and tools that can be used to complete a job analysis: the DACUM small group method is recognized by the National Institute of Corrections and in use in other agencies; (e.g., the department of corrections in Missouri, Kentucky, and Pennsylvania). Additional information on the DACUM process is available in the appendix of this report and online at: http://dacum.eku.edu/

Job Profile Development

The job profile presented in this report was based on a 1999 job analysis of Missouri Department of Corrections Investigator (MODOC). Five investigators from the Kentucky Department of Corrections were asked to review the earlier MODOC job profile. Figure 1 provides a side-by-side comparison of the two job profiles.

DACUM Job Analysis Results for Correctional Internal Affairs Investigators

The job analysis begins with the development of a brief job description. In this case the 2006 panel reviewed the 1999 MODOC description and made no substantive changes.

Description of Kentucky Department of Corrections Investigators
... A Department of Corrections Investigator I is one who conducts comprehensive investigations utilizing information gathering and evidence collection to provide assistance in administrative decision making pertaining to violation of criminal law & departmental policy.

Next the panels of high performing incumbent workers identify the duties and related tasks associated with this job. Duties are the general area of competence that successful workers in the occupation must demonstrate or perform on an on-going basis. A duty includes two or more distinct tasks. Tasks are work activities that have a definite beginning and ending, is observable, consists of two or more definite steps and leads to a product, service, or decision.

Once again there were few if any substantive changes made by the 2006 panel. (See Figure 2)

The duties are then ranked by each worker from most to least important. The ranking are based on each panel member’s view of the job. The duties and the related tasks are presented in their rank order from most to least important. Figure 3 shows the 2006 panel rankings.

The following list includes the six identified duties and the 55 related tasks. Following each task is the raw score derived from the responses of the five panelists to four questions.

(C) Critical – A measure of job tasks that panelists believe to be essential and/or most important components of a job.

(F) Frequency - A measure of job task that panelists believe to require the largest time commitments.

(N) Training Needs for New Worker - A measure of job tasks that panelists believe should be in a basic training program.

(F) Training Needs for Veteran Worker - A measure of job tasks that panelists believe should be included in an in-service training program.

For example the raw score of (c5) for task a.1 indicates that all five panelists viewed Brief Administrative Staff as a crucial task of the Internal Affair Investigator. The absence of a score in one or all four categories indicates that no panelists selected that item. (N=5)

Comparing Correctional Investigator Training Needs with PREA

The following tables reflect how the Prison Rape Elimination Act (PREA) could be integrated into training provided to Correctional Investigators. This was determined by a panel of Subject Matter Expert (SME) correctional investigators, well versed in the requirements of PREA. This SME panel was assembled by the Moss Group, Inc as part of their cooperative agreement with the National Institute of Corrections (NIC) to provide training and training recommendations to the correctional field.

The first table below reflects the 9 tasks determined by a focus group of correctional investigators to be the most essential to be included in training curricula for new investigators.* Table 1 includes training recommendations specific to PREA recommended by the SME panel.

Table 2 is similar to Table 1 but instead, focuses on the PREA related training needed by veteran correctional investigators for the 10 tasks determined to be most essential for their worker group.

These tables are meant to provide PREA related requirements to the findings developed during the review of the DACUM Job Profile of a Correctional Investigator. The reader can refer to the DACUM elsewhere in this report to learn all of the tasks that investigators do at some point, in the discharge of their duties. The tables in this section of the report are PREA training specific.

* This focus group of correctional investigators agreed that training for newly appointed investigators is rarely available at the time of their selection for the position. The absence of training was attributed to the limited number of employees in this worker group, and the extremely low level of employee turn over in the investigator ranks. Two proposals to address this lack of training were to consider developing curriculum that could be delivered via distance (web based, CD ROM, etc), or multi-jurisdictional training events for correctional investigators.

Training Curriculum Review

PREA Training Topic Exercise

On Wednesday August 2, 2006, the National Subject Matter Expert Team of Correctional Sexual Assault Investigators reviewed the DRAFT Moss Group Sexual Assault Investigator training.

Sub-divided into three workgroups and facilitated by an Eastern Kentucky University Facilitator and a client (National Institute of Corrections, American University, and/or the Moss Group). The Subject Matter Experts provided comments regarding the curriculum. The workgroup concluded that all 13 topics were appropriate for the training of both New and Veteran Investigators. Six additional topics were identified by the Subject Matter Experts.

Summary of Focused Conversation

A focused conversation was conducted with the eight Subject Matter Experts to help identify the impact that PREA legislation has on their professional practices, attitudes, and their agencies response to Offender on Offender and Staff on Offender sexual assault. Responses to the two Focused Conversation questions are summarized in this section.

What change has occurred in your work as a correctional sexual assault investigator since the enactment of PREA?

- Awareness level and realization that we have not been doing our jobs to the best of our abilities.
- I was hired because of PREA.
- More staff are viewing offenders as victims.
- Not a lot except documentation.
- More people involved in investigations because of policy change.
- Understanding of the dynamics of change.
- Amount of training that I conduct throughout the state.
- More cumbersome because of 'unfounded' allegations.
- As an investigator I was in the dark about process.
- Greater case load-all allegations requirement to investigate (20 cases per investigator).
- Male Offender to Offender increase in allegations.
- Streamlining policy (Georgia) female issues were previously part of the special investigations and now offender on offender.
- Embraced PREA because of increase in the attitude of offender as victim and deserve to serve their time with dignity.

What difference has PREA made for your system?

- Attitude change among staff that offenders will return to society.
- Greater awareness in facilities of sexual assaults and the seriousness and need for policy from front line on up.
- Focused us on the fact that offenders can be victims.
- Sexual assault prevention is the responsibility of all staff in system.
- PREA has made my job and department as a whole better.
- PREA has provided resources to unite a large group of people in the state.
- Helped to make us more professional and more accountability.
- Created greater awareness that offenders are human beings.
- Helped in the creation of the Office of Inspector General.
- Resources made available to us as part of PREA.
- Increase our ability to train investigators.
- Put all investigations under one umbrella.

Overview of the DACUM Job Analysis

Although there are a variety of techniques and tools that can be used to complete a job analysis: the DACUM small group method is recognized by the National Institute of Corrections and in use in other agencies; (e.g., Missouri, Kentucky, and Pennsylvania).

Methods of Job Analysis

Small Group Method: This method requires that a group of incumbent workers participate in developing the job analysis. DACUM Workshops include 6 – 8 workers.

Research Method: This method requires a person trained in job analysis to research available resources.

Job Observation Method: This method requires a worker who is performing the job and a person trained in task analysis to observe and analyze the job.

Each of the methods can yield valuable information that can be used by curriculum design and development teams to identify the knowledge, skills and attitudes to be addressed in training and professional development experiences. It is important to verify or validate the initial job analysis. The validation process provides a check to assure that the data is accurate and remains representative over time and across groups / organizations. Following a worker validation of the job profile, a management review is conducted. The final “official” job profile is developed after the management review.

Definition of Duties and Tasks

Duty: a general area of competence that successful workers in the occupation must demonstrate or perform on an on-going basis. A duty includes two or more distinct tasks.

Task: a work activity that has a definite beginning and ending, is observable, consists of two or more definite steps and leads to a product, service, or decision.

In addition, the process also provides a job description and a listing of knowledge, skills and traits needed by high performing workers. (Nolan, 1990).

The job analysis process is led by a neutral facilitator (trained in the DACUM process) and a recorder who uses storyboarding to record the focus groups' comments. Storyboarding, which was popularized by the Disney Corporation, is a helpful mechanism for capturing the ideas / observations of a small group on paper / index cards and posting the cards on a wall / board in front of the workshop members (The McNellis Company, 1991).
In the DACUM storyboarding process, panelists are encouraged to develop duty and task statements that include a verb, modifier and a noun. The storyboard cards are temporarily attached to the wall or board to allow for rapid changes, sequencing and modification. The storyboard process is very fluid, flexible and visual – all of which help to maintain the group’s focus on describing their job duties and tasks.

The goal of the DACUM process used by the Moss Group was to apply the profiles to the development of professional training; however, there are many other uses for DACUM profiles. DACUM Job Analysis can be used to evaluate position descriptions; recruit, select and evaluate personnel; conduct literacy audits; review organization structure and interactions; and meet some of the requirements of the Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA). A listing of DACUM and storyboarding resources has been included at the conclusion of this report.
PREA Subject Matter Expert Review of Investigator Job Profile

A review of the Kentucky Department of Corrections Internal Affairs Investigator Job Profile was conducted by a National Subject Matter Expert team of correctional sexual assault investigators familiar with the mandates of the Prison Rape Elimination Act (PREA).

The eight Subject Matter Experts were assigned to three work teams. Each work team included a facilitator, a client, resource person, and 2-3 subject matter experts. Each work team was asked to review from 1-3 of the duty bands included on the Kentucky Department of Corrections Internal Affairs Investigator job profile.

Participants were asked to review duty bands, verify these duties and tasks, and identify if there were differences between Offender on Offender or Staff on Offender assault cases. Each group reported the results of their group to the full workgroup.

Most significant in the process and practice of Internal Affairs Investigators occurred in the duty bands A & B. The review of duty band C indicated the diversity and range of “other duties as assigned” that were included in the responsibilities of investigators.
